Abstract

The Safety & Security 2025 conference arises from the need to integrate medical, technological, and territorial expertise to address, in a coordinated and multidisciplinary way, the new challenges posed by global and local emergencies.

Today's world is increasingly vulnerable due to environmental, geopolitical, and social factors: extreme natural events, geopolitical instability, hybrid conflicts, large-scale health crises, and the impact of climate change.

In this context, Disaster Medicine emerges as a strategic discipline, combining scientific rigor, technological innovation, and operational readiness.

The main goal of the conference is to foster an open and dynamic dialogue among civilian and military experts, institutions, universities, and emergency-response professionals - encouraging the creation of resilient, flexible, and replicable models.

The event is structured along three main pillars of modern security:

Fragile Territories - Analysis of geological and hydrogeological risks, health and operational management of emergencies in complex scenarios, with a focus on the protection of rescuers and patients in both civilian and military contexts.

Field Health Emergencies - From integrated management of critical patients to differentiated civil-military triage, safe transport, and the use of algorithms and advanced training for quick and appropriate decision-making.

Emergency Technologies - Innovative tools such as telemedicine, wearable devices, artificial intelligence, and drones, now essential for monitoring, forecasting, and rapid response to critical events.

Special attention is devoted to psychological and relational dimensions, with sessions dedicated to leadership, teamwork, and psychological support — recognizing the crucial role of individual and collective resilience in managing stress and preventing PTSD.

The scientific value of the event lies in its ability to network experiences and knowledge, fostering a constructive dialogue across disciplines.

The methodology includes short, dynamic presentations to stimulate interaction and collaboration, with the aim of generating operational recommendations and continuous education pathways.

Ultimately, Safety & Security 2025 serves as a laboratory of ideas and practices, where Medical Intelligence meets operational reality, offering concrete tools to prepare professionals and communities to face global and local risks with competence, speed, and resilience.
